We wish a very happy 78th birthday to Barbra Streisand, an entertainer of many talents. In the course of her career spanning six decades, she has delighted admiring fans as a singer, actress and filmmaker. Streisand is the highest-selling female recording artist of all time and one of only two performers in history to have won an Emmy, Grammy, Oscar, Tony and Peabody Award. She demonstrated a unique ability to mesmerize both costars and audiences with a powerful and emotional voice ... and her smile.
In her debut film role as Fanny Brice in Funny Girl (1968), Streisand earned an Oscar and Golden Globe as Best Actress and "Star of the Year" honors from the National Association of Theater Owners.

"I am simple, complex, generous, selfish, unattractive, beautiful, lazy, and driven" - Barbra Streisand

Oklahoma Movie Theater Plans Masks and Plexiglass for Opening in May (Variety)

Tulsa's Circle Cinema is one of the premiere art house cinemas in the south. Last week, owner Clark Wiens announced that they were preparing to re-open and welcome back customers "sometime in May", in accordance with Oklahoma's overall plan to re-open businesses, "Open Up and Recover Safely: A Three-phase Approach to Open Oklahoma's Economy". In an interview with Variety Magazine, Wiens describes how he came to his decision to proceed with re-opening at this time, and the numerous precautions being taken to protect the health of the theatre staff and customers, including changes to procedures in the core areas of ticketing, concessions and seating. While any discussion over re-opening is bound to be controversial, the experience of theatres such as Circle Cinema that re-open in May will serve as a proving ground for the industry on best practices for operating in a post-corona world.

IFC Films to Offer Free Library Titles to Reopen Indie Theaters (Hollywood Reporter)

As exhibitors work through the details of when and how to re-open their theatres, one central question is deciding what films to show during the early weeks after re-opening, while waiting for new studio releases to arrive later in July. Indie distributor IFC Films stepped into this breach with a generous offer. The IFC Indie Theater Revival Project will provide art house theatres with the opportunity to screen any of the nearly 200 participating films from the IFC library at no rental charge during the first month after the theatre re-opens. These films include many of the best titles IFC has distributed over their 20 years in independent film distribution, including Boyhood, Frances Ha, Y Tu Mama Tambien and The Babadook.

Neon's Spaceship Earth will premiere on-line as a Virtual Cinema release, with a portion of the box office going to fund local theaters.

Streaming Wars: Virtual Cinemas Offer Haven for Cinephiles and Struggling Theaters Alike (IndieWire)

Movie-goers wanting to show support for their favorite local cinema during the shutdown have an unexpected and new option – streaming! Offered as Virtual Cinema or Theatrical Video on Demand, movie-lovers stuck at home can go online to watch some of the indie films that would have been showing at their local theatre. A significant portion of their virtual ticket purchase is goes to their favorite theater. Kino Lorber, Film Movement and Music Box Films are among the leading independent distributors who have pioneered this new model. Last week, Neon announced plans to release its Sundance acquisition "Spaceship Earth" as a virtual cinema release. Even the modest revenue from TVOD services can make a big difference, allowing theaters and their loyal customers to connect on-line and demonstrate support for each other.

MGM Cuts a Third of Their Staff in the Wake of COVID-19 Pandemic, Untied Artists Furloughs Third of Staff and Annapurna Pictures Makes Film and TV Executive Cuts, Including CFO James Pong (Deadline)

The coronavirus pandemic has forced studios to reduce costs as they attempt to navigate their way through the storm. In many cases, cost reductions have focused on staff and salary expense, resulting in a painful cocktail of pay cuts, furloughs and layoffs. Last week, MGM announced its plans to eliminate 50 positions from its team of 750 employees. Distribution joint venture Annapurna/United Artists Releasing furloughed one third of its marketing and distribution staff, with hope that most will be able to return to their positions later in the summer once theatres have re-opened. Even prior to the current crisis, MGM and UA Releasing were skating on thin ice, so it's expected that they would have to act swiftly in the face of the shutdown to reduce their expenses. #### CJ Opinion: A Theater Re-Opening Manifesto (Celluloid Junkie)

Celluloid Junkie published a thoughtful commentary by film executive Edward Ryan which makes two key points persuasively. First, the pressures caused by the COVID-19 shut down will cause massive changes in the industry, both to studios and exhibitors. All players will be forced to adjust in order to meet the changing needs of movie-fans, and many will not survive due to a lack of resources or vision.

Changes that would have taken ten years to play out under normal conditions will instead take two. Second, even after the streaming world has matured fully, studios and exhibitors will continue their 100-year partnership in cranking out big-budget theatrical releases. Only by investing in a wide theatrical release can a studio create the exposure that will maximize financial return over the entire life of distribution over all channels.

Hollywood Beacons in the Night (NY Times)

The NY Times published this beautiful gallery of movie palaces of Los Angeles. While all these theatres are closed currently as they wait for the pandemic to pass by, their illuminated marquees are a beacon that signals a future return to night at the movies.

States of The Nation: How Is The COVID-19 Crisis Impacting Different US States? Courtesy of Gower Street Analytics

The domestic market had lost approximately $1.16 billion year-on-year through April 23, a 38.9% drop. Within that the US has shed $1.04 billion and Canada $103.6 million. But knowing what is happening at a market, or even country-wide, level will not necessarily be the priority for localized exhibitors and understanding what is happening on a state level could inform the wider picture moving forward.

YTD Box Office Losses by State

The choropleth map above looks at the losses by state compared to an average of the past three years - the darker the coloring the bigger the current impact. Simply looking at total monetary loss would, of course, show the biggest losses in California, Texas, Florida and New York due to the size of their respective box office in normal years. California alone has lost over $250 million compared to an average of the past three years – more than the entire mid-West region ($210 million).

However, by comparing each state's current 2020 grosses against their own average box office results from 2017-2019 we see a different picture. State losses range from between just shy of 50% at the high and just over 38% at the low. But the high is not California and the low is not Vermont. Instead Rhode Island is revealed to have seen the greatest loss by percentage of business so far. While its $3.24 million loss (compared to the three-year average) appears to pale in comparison to California (it is only 1.3% of California's monetary loss) Rhode Island's own percentage of business loss is 49.5% compared to California's 48.4% (sixth among the US states). Illinois, Hawaii and Louisiana all stand at more than 49%.

On the other end of the scale is New Hampshire. While its monetary loss is marginally higher than Rhode Island's ($3.48 million) this is only 38.1% down in terms of percentage of business. It is the only state currently showing a business loss of under 40%, with Maine and Wyoming next with just under 42%. Among the big four US box office drivers Texas is holding up best with business down 42.4% despite a $125.9 million monetary deficit.

Of course, Texas is one of the few states that has seen no complete days of closure since most theaters across the country shutdown in mid-March. At least eight of its drive-in theaters are currently operating, more than in any other state, with more set to open in early May. In comparison New York and Pennsylvania, currently suffering business losses of 47.4% and 46.7% respectively, have none of their drive-ins operating despite boasting them in greater numbers than Texas or any other state. In total 22 states have at least one drive-in theater currently playing movies; New Hampshire is not one of them.

The number of drive-in theaters in operation will continue to grow throughout May. Those already playing are offering a mix of current releases, such as TROLLS WORLD TOUR and ONWARD; recent releases, such as BAD BOYS FOR LIFE and THE CALL OF THE WILD; and popular catalog titles, such as JURASSIC PARK and JUMANJI: WELCOME TO THE JUNGLE.

Screendollars · contactus@screendollars.com · (978) 494-4150

Meanwhile, traditional theaters that are closed will return to business at different times in different states. The planned duration of stay-at-home orders vary significantly from state-to-state. Several states have not issued such a measure at all; many are currently due to expire this week unless extended; some run into mid- or late-May; Virginia's is currently set to run into June; while those in four states, including California, have indefinite ends.

Georgia's governor has announced theaters could re-open this week, although how many will do so remains to be seen. The country's biggest circuit, AMC, has already announced it will not be re-opening any locations until there is new Hollywood product to fill its screens – currently scheduled for July with Universal's THE FOREVER PURGE, Warner Bros' TENET and Disney's MULAN; though that too could yet change. As we pointed out two weeks ago, with all AMC sites closed it would be impossible for the domestic market as a whole to achieve the Stage 1 marker of Gower Street's Blueprint To Recovery – the minimum number of theaters re-open that are capable in normal circumstances of achieving an 80% market share. Cinemark had already said it was aiming for a July re-opening.

This week Gower Street launched its domestic-focused Road to Recovery report, which looks in-depth at data across each US state and Canadian province as well as the market as a whole. This report offers a state-by-state view of what is happening daily to help the industry track the situation and identify early signs of recovery that will provide guidance for other states and provinces, while also giving more localized operators insight into what is happening in their, and neighboring, states. As well as graphs and data on year-to-date box office; number of theaters open; and the growth of the virus; each state-view features localized comment and the key markers of our 5-stage Blueprint To Recovery identified for every state and province.

If you have comments or questions about Gower Street's charts, or to access our Domestic and International Road To Recovery reports, please visit our website at: https://gower.st

Correction: In last week's article the comparison of titles then scheduled for December 2020 compared to December 2019 inadvertently omitted three titles from 2019. The comment should have reflected a 40% rise in titles for December 2020, including those seeing a limited opening in the month but due to expand wide in January.

Hollywood Report by Martin Grove

When theatres finally reopen, social distancing will impact distributors as well as exhibitors.

The New Normal will bring alternating vacant rows and rows where empty seats separate moviegoers. The grossing potential for all venues will be a lot less. Multiplexes will counter that to some extent by adding showtimes for event films like TOP GUN: MAVERICK (pictured – Tom Cruise & Monica Barbaro on set) and by playing them in more auditoriums.

Low budget horror films will have the best shot at getting any leftover screens. Awards worthy indie films will find it harder to be seen and to benefit at the box office from critical acclaim.

Hollywood's $200M+ tentpoles will face other problems. They'll get the screens, but they'll also need more time to earn enough to make the studios' spend big/gross big formula work. In a less front-loaded exhibition landscape, they'll have to play longer and not run into other event titles competing for the same demo.

A possible silver lining for exhibitors: Needing to play longer could turn the controversial 90-day pre-streaming theatrical window into something that's suddenly in the studios' best interest!

April would have ended quietly with no major studio wanting to open a big film only to see it overwhelmed one week later by BLACK WIDOW.

Pre-pandemic, MGM/Universal/Eon's 3rd week of NO TIME TO DIE would probably have added 20-25M. That should have been enough to keep Bond 25 #1 – unless Lionsgate/QC's horror thriller ANTEBELLUM (pictured) connected in a really big way with the genre's -25F core audience.

Screendollars · contactus@screendollars.com · (978) 494-4150

ANTEBELLUM, starring Janelle Monae (MOONLIGHT), wasn't on tracking reports yet when they evaporated in mid-March, but its best first choice demo would likely have been young women. It should also have benefited from strong appeal to African-American moviegoers. So, it might have wound up giving Bond a run for 1st place. It's undated now.

The weekend's other wide release, Picturehouse's PG-13 power-of-faith drama FATIMA, is now arriving 8/14. If it tracked similar to I STILL BELIEVE, it would also have been a first choice for -25F and would likely have done next best with +25F. BELIEVE opened 3/13 to $9.1M.

Nonetheless, this weekend wouldn't have come close to this time last year when Disney/Marvel's AVENGERS: ENDGAME opened to $357.1M.
