Film Flashback... Ghostbusters & Gremlins Opened on 6/8/1984

Weekends with two major openings that aren't targeted to the same audience typically boost box office business – as we just saw Memorial Day weekend. There was, however, a time when studios didn't always avoid going head-to-head with the wrong films.

The classic example of what not to do occurred June 8, 1984 when Columbia opened Ivan Reitman's action fantasy GHOSTBUSTERS and Warner Bros. launched Joe Dante's action fantasy GREMLINS. Both were going to play best to younger males. Both studios wanted to kick-off that weekend because in those days early June was when most schools had just closed for the summer, so younger males were now able to see movies all week long. GHOSTBUSTERS looked the strongest. Reitman had already directed hit comedies like MEATBALLS (1979 - $43M) & STRIPES (1981 - $85M). His new film had big star power – Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd & Sigourney Weaver.

GREMLINS' Joe Dante hadn't directed any big hits yet but had gotten lots of attention with his werewolf film THE HOWLING (1981 - $18M). Stars Zach Galligan, Phoebe Cates & Hoyt Axton weren't as well-known as GHOSTBUSTERS' star trio. GREMLINS did have some significant star power behind the camera in executive producer Steven Spielberg, whose INDIANA JONES & THE TEMPLE OF DOOM had just opened Memorial Day weekend to $42.3M and would do $333M worldwide. Despite industry speculation that one title might move, both studios stayed the course. Neither picture opened as well as it might have done with more compatible competition. GHOSTBUSTERS did $13.6M at 1,339 theatres ($10,140 per) while GREMLINS did $12.5M at 1,511 theatres

An Encore Screening of the Original Ghostbusters was held on 8/16/20 at the Sony Pictures Drive-In Experience – Click to Play

($8,280 per). Hollywood handicappers knew who'd be the winner from their per theatre averages.

In 1984, GHOSTBUSTERS grossed $220.9M domestic vs. $144.4M for GREMLINS. Those were very good numbers for the time, but both films would likely have done even better if they hadn't started by splitting their target demo. Both spawned blah sequels. GREMLINS 2 (1990) did $41.5M domestic. A GREMLINS 3 project is now in development at WB/Legendary/Amblin. GHOSTBUSTERS 2 (1989) did $112.5M domestic and a female driven GHOSTBUSTERS reboot (2016) grossed $128.4M domestic.

This Nov. 11 the reboot GHOSTBUSTERS: AFTERLIFE opens via Sony, directed by Ivan's son Jason Reitman (UP IN THE AIR) with Murray, Aykroyd & Weaver returning. Happily, as of now, it's the only action fantasy opening that day.

ROW8: an Exhibitor-Led, Premium Video on Demand Service that Provides Moviegoers At-Home Access to Watch Major Studio Films

After a year of forced theatre closures and health restrictions, exhibitors are delighted to be able to welcome back customers to their theatres to enjoy a parade of new releases. However, the pandemic has changed how consumers watch movies and how studios distribute them. The traditions of 90-day exclusive theatrical windows no longer apply, as more studios are adopting varied policies on timing their releases to theatres and on-line.

Streaming brings a net increase in the amount of time and money consumers spend watching movies. Even as box office grosses are returning, exhibitors can tap into an additional source of income by capitalizing on the explosion of on-line movie viewing.

Screendollars supports exhibitors with a Video-on-Demand service that can be offered to your moviegoing customers. The service is presented under exhibitor's own brand, in a partnership with ROW8, the leading independent Hollywood movie service. The solution allows consumers to browse through a catalog of more than 1500 titles, including the latest wide releases from every major Hollywood studio. The moment that studios make their films available for PVOD rental on the major streaming platforms, they are also available for you to offer your customers through the ROW8 service.

Exhibitors are not required to make an up-front investment in technology or licensing to be able to offer this solution. We ask exhibitors only for their commitment to market this new PVOD service as an option for at-home movie viewing. Because your customers are movie lovers by definition, it is likely that they are already watching premium movies at home in addition to their visits to your theatre. We suggest that you should get into the game and offer them the chance to watch the best movies that Hollywood has to offer through a service with your name on it.

As Grants For Shuttered Venues Trickle Out, Many Owners Are Still Waiting (NPR)

Last December 27th, former President Donald Trump signed into law the Economic Aid to Hard-Hit Small Businesses, Nonprofits, and Venues Act, which included $15 billion in funding for the Shuttered Venues Operator Grant program. SVOG has been seen as a lifeline for movie theatres and live performance venues whose business was devastated during the COVID-19 pandemic by mandated closures and dramatic limits in allowable capacity. Under the program, an affected venue can receive grants amounting to as much as 45% of total revenues from 2019, a lifeline to help bridge the gap until normal operations can resume as the pandemic lifts.

However, the rollout of the SVOG program by the U.S. Small Business Administration has been excruciatingly slow, with many technical glitches and other stops and starts along the way. As of today, only 31 organizations have received funding under the program out of more than 13,000 applicants. Much of the current delay is due to the SBA's requirements for due-diligence in order to limit fraud, which has been a chronic concern with the SBA's Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) offered to general small businesses.

While theatre owners are frustrated at the slow pace, others have recognized the challenges involved in administering this unprecedented program. Steve Schoaps, the owner of the independent Strother Cinema in Seminole,

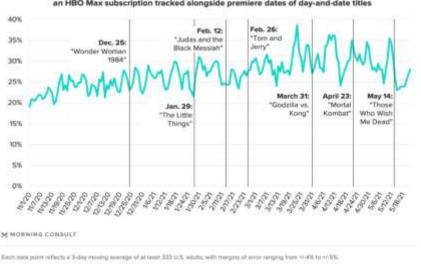

Oklahoma said, "In the Small Business Administration's defense, this was a task that was thrown at them at the last second, and this was a monumental task, because everyone was trying to get access to this." As the public health situation improves with the successful rollout of the vaccine and Hollywood is once again releasing major new titles, the SVOG disaster relief funds cannot come soon enough, allowing theatres to pay bills, re-hire staff and re-open to welcome back moviegoers.

Day-and-Date Films Offer HBO Max a Slight Boost to Purchasing Intent, Data Suggests (Morning Consult)

Over the past year, the polling firm Morning Consult has tracked consumer interest in subscribing to HBO Max as well as other major streaming services. Parent company WarnerMedia made waves in the industry last December when they announced their intention to release every title in the 2021 Warner Bros. slate of movies both to theatres and HBO Max simultaneously. This announcement upset exhibitors in particular, who have relied on studios providing their new releases to theaters for an exclusive run, before they are made available on-line. In making this announcement, WarnerMedia's CEO Jason

Day-and-Date Titles Give Modest Lift to HBO Max Purchasing Consideration

Kilar stated that their day-and-date release strategy would apply to 2021 only, in response to the effect of the pandemic on moviegoing in theatres. He also emphasized the importance of HBO Max to the company's long-term growth. In the Domestic market, HBO and HBO Max subscriptions totaled 44.2 million at the end of Q1 2021, up from 41.5 million at the end of Q4 2020.

Results from the most recent Morning Consult poll indicate that 30% of adults were likely to purchase an HBO Max subscription in the three days before the premiere of a day-and-date title, up from an average of 24% when polled last year. This "likely" percentage peaked at 39% in the three days just prior to the March 31 release of Godzilla Vs. Kong, which drove significant growth in new HBO Max subscriptions as well as pandemic-best results at the box office for theatres.

AMC Boss Adam Aron Basks in Meme-Stock Spotlight (Wall Street Journal)

This Thursday, AMC Entertainment raised $587 million through an issuance of new shares. It was the seventh time in the last nine months that the company had issued new shares, raising a cumulative total of $2.2 billion. After the new shares were issued, the company's share price fell 18%, from $72.62 to $51.34 per share. It is common for a company's per share price to decrease after selling new shares, which dilutes the equity ownership of existing shareholders. On the other hand, even after this drop, AMC stock is trading up 2,850% from early in the year, when shares were trading briefly at just under $2 per share when many market watchers were predicting an imminent bankruptcy filing by the world's largest exhibitor.

Many have praised AMC's CEO Adam Aron for navigating successfully through the troubled waters of the pandemic, including reaping benefits from the wild fluctuations in the company's stock. They have rewarded hordes of retail investors that have stepped up to the challenge of #SaveAMC by promising future dividends and offering free popcorn at the theatre. This perk also addresses one of the key challenges facing exhibition, enticing moviegoers to return to cinemas where they can enjoy Hollywood's newest releases on the big screen. A rapid recovery for the box office will greatly enhance the long-term prospects for AMC and other exhibitors.

After a precarious year, AMC appears to be well on its way back to a position of stability, even considering expanding its footprint through acquisition of new theatres, including negotiations to take over the recently closed Pacific Theatres and Arclight Cinemas in coveted Southern California markets.

Sean Penn and Wes Anderson Will Compete at Cannes (NY Times)

This year, there has been much concern over the fate of the upcoming Cannes Film Festival, which has already been pushed back from its traditional May dates to now take place in July from the 6th to 19th. Festival organizers were hoping that the two-month delay would allow the event to take place this year, giving extra time to benefit from the continued rollout of vaccinations across Europe and the U.S. Recently, French health authorities have been on a course to ease restrictions on gatherings, including cinema screenings as well as larger public events such as Cannes. On Wednesday

June 9th, the country will raise its maximum allowed capacity at movie theatres from 35% to 65% and push back its mandated nighttime curfew from 9pm to 11pm. Cannes 2021 announced last week that it will welcome visitors from the U.S., U.K. and most countries if they can show proof of vaccination and submit a negative COVID-19 PCR test upon arrival. Attendees who cannot show proof of vaccination will also be allowed to attend but will be required to self-isolate for seven days upon arrival in France, attest to a "compelling reason" for their travel to France and attendance at the festival, and submit a negative PCR test. Jean-Baptiste Lemoyne, France's minister of tourism, said, "Nothing would be worse than to enter yet another COVID wave because we were not careful enough."

Sean Penn at the Cannes Film Festival in 2016

The buzz is building for the lineup of films scheduled to premiere at this year's festival. One of the top contenders is Flag Day, directed by and starring Sean Penn. Wes Anderson's The French Dispatch has also drawn attention, featuring a large cast A-listers, including Timothee Chalamet, Frances McDormand, Tilda Swinton, Benicio Del Toro, Owen Wilson and Bill Murray among others. Among the 2,000 films submitted this year for consideration, the program will include many shorts and features that were shot during the lockdowns, bearing witness to the common experience the world has shared over the 18 months. Thierry Frémaux, the festival's artistic director, explained, "Cinema will bear the traces of this. It will remember this moment."

GOWER STREET'S Box Office Outlook

Recovery Gains Traction in May: $1.4 billion Global Box Office with 76% of Cinemas Open

In May, global cinemas accounted for $1.4 billion in box office. This is the third best global monthly result since March 2020. It was supported by a significant increase in the global access to movie theatres. The number of cinemas open by market share grew up to 76% (+12%) worldwide at the end of May. The highest level since the pandemic-era peak of 79% in the first week of October last year! May illustrated the simple equation for speeding up on the road to recovery - More cinemas open, more attractive movies to show, more box office coming in!

The stacked bar graph on the left shows total box office levels split out by the three key global markets: Domestic, China and International (excluding China). The pie chart indicates the current deficit compared to the average of the past three (pre-pandemic) years (2017-2019) and where those losses are currently coming from. The bar graph on the bottom right displays the percentage drops globally.

Gower Street's latest Global Box Office Tracker (GBOT) shows that 2021 global box office grew to $6.7 billion in May, from $5.3 billion a month ago. At the end of May, the current 2021 global box office deficit compared to the average of the last three pre-pandemic years (2017-2019) is -$10.8 billion, a drop of -62%.

A bit more than half to the global box office in May was delivered by China with $0.7 billion. It was their third best result since the pandemic began. It is just behind the record-breaking Chinese New Year February this year and the Golden Week October last year. As in those two months, this May performance was also mainly driven by a lucrative holiday week, the Labour Day holiday. Set from May 1- 5 this period achieved another all-time high this year, grossing nearly $260 million with a phalanx of successful new local titles.

However, none of those topped the monthly charts. Instead, it was F9 with $186 million, of a current $193 million total, that raced to #1. This is the best cume of a US title in China since HOBBS & SHAW in August 2019. For the May 21 play-week it drove China - the second time this month - past the Stage 5 marker of Gower Street's Blueprint to Recovery (measured as a weekly box office result equivalent to those in the top quartile of weekly business in the previous two pre-pandemic years). A second impressive proof that foreign titles can still score big in China after GODZILLA VS KONG gave the first example in March.

China's 2021 box office is $3.9 billion at the end of May. It is tracking even with the 2017-2019 three-year average for the first five months of the year.

The Domestic market has some way to go until numbers of that size are reached. At the beginning of June, it had achieved a total of $0.7 billion for 2021, tracking -85% behind the three-year average, a total of -$4 billion. Nevertheless, the market has also now finally reclaimed its rightful place as the #2 global box office market in 2021, overtaking an initially very strong Japan on May 1. It further recorded the best monthly result since March 2020 with a $222m box office, a small uptick of 3% over April.

The Domestic market saw big progress in May on the exhibition side of the business. The number of movie theaters open by market share went up to 75% at the end of May from 61% a month ago. This is by far the highest level of operating sites since the pandemic began over 14 months ago.

This is a key element in the framework that allowed the Domestic market hit Stage 3 of Gower Street's Blueprint to Recovery for the first time during the May 28 Memorial Day play-week. The Stage 3 target is measured as a weekly box office result equivalent to the lowest grossing week in the previous two pre-pandemic years. This is an important step in the recovery process, signifying a consistency of audience engagement over a minimum period.

The play-week was fuelled by the national holiday and two openers with A QUIET PLACE, PART II and CRUELLA. The two titles combined accounted for 86% of the week's $118 million total. An exceptionally promising sign for the capability of the current market is that the first week's result of A QUIET PLACE, PART II is 3% ahead of the very successful first instalment. This despite capacity restrictions and a quarter of movie theaters (by market share) remaining closed across the Domestic market. A lot to build on in the months to come.

The same can be said about the International market (excluding China). The number of cinemas open by market share grew to 67% at the end of May, up from 48% a month before. This is the highest number since the beginning of November last year. The main driver was the EMEA region. Major International markets with the UK and FRANCE finally re-opened after many months of closure. Italy further saw a bigger expansion of cinemas opening in May, boosting its number of cinemas open by market share to 73% up from just 13%.

The EMEA box office in May was the biggest since last October, when the second wave of wide closures started. In its first play-week back (starting May 19), France immediately generated its second-best result since the start of the pandemic; achieving a Stage 3 level performance for the fourth time. The UK hit its Stage 3 target for the first time in the second play-week back (starting May 28), lifted by a national holiday (May 31) and school half-term holidays alongside new openers THE CONJURING: THE DEVIL MADE ME DO IT and CRUELLA joining holdover PETER RABBIT 2.

The comeback of the UK and France was a much-needed addition to only a few strong EMEA markets in the year so far, mainly Russia. Its 2021 cume at the end of May was $257 million, accounting for nearly half (46%) of the EMEA cume. That makes Russia currently the fourth biggest market in the world; it is showing a deficit of just -22% against the average of the last three pre-pandemic years (2017-2019). Of all Comscore-tracked markets only China is performing better.

As in EMEA, May saw many cinemas re-opening in Latin America. At the end of May 62% of cinemas were open by market share, significantly up from 47% a month earlier. This is the highest level since the peak of 64% in mid-December. Ecuador, Colombia, and Mexico were the markets seeing the highest gains in May.

The positive developments in EMEA and Latin America helped the International market (excluding China) to reach the second best monthly international box office of the current year. The International monthly total of $0.5 billion is just slightly behind the prior month's $0.6 billion. The 2021 International box office total reached $2.2 billion at the end of May with a deficit against the three-year average of -$6.8 billion (-76%).

That the International May results are not higher is due to the Asia Pacific region. After being the most stable region during the pandemic for a long period, multiple countries of the region were hit more severely than before by Covid-19 and connected restrictions. The region recorded its lowest monthly box office since July last year during May.

Taiwan, one of just four global markets that had reached Stage 5 levels, needed to close its cinemas for the first time in May. Malaysia needed to close nearly all its cinemas for the fourth time since March last year. In the last week of May, the Australian state of Victoria, including the capital Melbourne, also moved into another lockdown.

This is a reminder that the recovery is not always as simple as just forward progress. It is fragile and we will most likely continue to see setbacks. Until then there is more hope on the schedule. Japan, the #3 market globally, allowed key prefectures of Tokyo and Osaka to re-open cinemas June 1. These prefectures represent around 35% of the market and were shut since April 25. The Netherlands is also welcoming back guests to cinemas from June 5 having been closed five and half months.

MARTIN GROVE'S Hollywood Report

Now that Amazon's taking over MGM, what it really needs is a theatre circuit.

Owning cinemas would give Amazon a unique post-pandemic advantage. It's clear from hits like GODZILLA VS. KONG & A QUIET PLACE 2 (pictured – Emily Blunt) that exhibition's not dead. People are heading back to theatres to see films they really want to see -- in IMAX, PLF & 3D with booming Dolby & tubs of buttered popcorn!

With theatres, Amazon could market a Prime+ brand, dedicating one auditorium per multiplex to members, who'd be able to see Amazon's event content in theatres – features or series. They'd scan barcodes at the box office to charge $1 per person to their accounts. They'd see Amazon's content theatrically without paying high ticket prices and they'd also be able to see it streaming "free" at home. Prime+ would also resonate with top filmmakers who still want their movies to play theatrically.

This new members-only audience would boost concession revenues for Amazon theatres. As a mega-streamer/exhibitor, Amazon would have the best of both worlds – sharing in moviegoing's recovery by playing everyone's tentpoles while also streaming its own content.

The latest case in point: WB/NL's R rated THE CONJURING: THE DEVIL MADE ME DO IT. Exhibition should remain very healthy given how well this summer's pipeline is stocked with similarly scary product.

Two-time Academy Award winner Cate Blanchett teams up with Kevin Hart in director Eli Roth's Borderlands. Lilith (Blanchett), an infamous treasure hunter with a mysterious past, reluctantly returns to her home planet of Pandora to find the missing daughter of Atlas (Edgar Ramirez), the universe's most powerful S.O.B. but now desperate for redemption; Tiny Tina (Ariana Greenblatt), a feral pre-teen demolitionist; Krieg (Florian Munteanu), Tina's musclebound, rhetorically challenged protector; Tannis (Curtis), the scientist who's seen it all; and Claptrap (Black), a persistently wiseass robot. These unlikely heroes must battle alien monsters and dangerous bandits to find and protect the missing girl, who may hold the key to unimaginable power.
